Every actor has a journey that starts with their chance to stretch themselves and really learn to love what they do. For most kids, it is shows like the one you are seeing today that start that journey. I am so happy to know this is the first full scale musical for many of my students and for the others, a chance for them to learn and grow in this amazing piece of theatre. I am so grateful to those whom continue to support this amazing program at MPAA. There is not another program in the SW Washington/Portland area where students ages 6-13 get opportunities like this. These students get their own production, where they are performing lead roles, while learning technical training in the performing arts. Arts funding in our schools continues to decrease and a need for programs like ours is more vital than ever.

As MPAA continues to build its programming, I hope that you will support us and help us provide more opportunities like this. We are currently looking to expand our programming and acquire a larger performing facility. Our community deserves a facility where all members of the community can grow and learn in the arts in a safe space. I ask you to please make a year-end tax deductible donation to Metropolitan Performing Arts Academy to help us move towards our goal and build this Performing Arts Center. Our capital campaign will feature a one year plan to raise the needed 1.5 million dollars. We need your support!

Thank you for attending ANNIE Jr and supporting children’s theatre performed by actual children.

Warmest Regards,

Noah Scott,
